RIVAL STEAM YACHTS.

"I built the yacht for my own use and not for racing purposes," Jay Gould said yesterday when he was shown the published report of the conversation between Messrs. Cramp and Roach, the rival shipbuilders. After he had finished reading the newspaper statement, he added: "Mr. Roach seems to be getting up on his ear. But I would not race my boat under any circumstances. I understand that the Yosemite is a very fast boat."

The Atalants, Mr. Gould's yacht, which was built by the Cramps, is reported to have made seventeen knots an hour in some of her recent cruises. Even this speed is not what the builders promised when they were given full swing in the construction of the vessel. They said that the yacht should be the fastest ship of her size affoat. The owners of several steam yachts have expressed a willingness te race the Atalants, and at least once the Stranger steamed right away from her, but Mr. Gould's friends say that the officers of the Atalanta did not know that a race was even contemplated.

That way achts built by John Roach from the Atlanta, and at least once the Stranger steamed right away from her, but Mr. Gould's friends say that the officers of the Atalauta did not know that a race was even contemplated.

The two vachts built by John Roach from the same model for George S. Scott and Washington E. Connor are disappointments to their owners in point of speed. Mr. Scott's boat cannot do over twelve knots an hour, but Mr. Connor declares that his can easily do fifteen. Both owners, however, want to go faster. In regard to a race between steam yachts, Mr. Scott said yesterday:

"I have a high respect for the power of steam. If any one wants to have a race between steam yachts, I have no objection, but I prefer to remain on shore to witness the contest. A race by sailing yachts is one thing and one by steam vessels another; I prefer to look at the latter from a safe distance. I have reached that point in life when I am just a little particular about what I do."

The American Yacht Club has not yet arranged any races. One of the reasons presumably is that its members have not agreed upon a basis of allowances. Rufus Hatch, before he went West, was greatly exercised on this question. The plan proposed by the measurer of the club was based on the grate surface of the vessels, but Mr. Hatch expressed mortification because there was nothing said in the report about the nature of the fuel.

"You see," he remarked solemuly, "one might burn pitch and the other Cincinnati hams. It might be only a Mississippi steamboat race over again; one wouldn't know what the other was burning, unless possibly you could tell by the smell of the smoke, There might be an algebraic equation made out of that."

The relative speed of the vessels of the American Yacht Club, the first organization of steam vessels ever attempted, is exciting great interest among yachtsmen. The hardy sailors of the Now-York Yacht Club were affoat yesterday; Charles J. Osborn was at Long Branch, and Commodore Sinith hardly waited for the sound of the song at the Stock Exchange before he set The published statement that Plum Island has en bought for the use of the American Yacht Club pronounced false. One of the trustees of the ub said yesterday that the report had been set loat to compel the New-York Yacht Club to buy a property.

FLIGHT STOPPED BY A BULLET. STREET-ROBBER SHOT WHILE BUNNING AWAY

Patrolinan Thomas Kenneally, of the Fitth Precinct, who was on duty in West-st, near Desbrosses-st, at 2:15 a. m. yesterday, heard cries of "Murder" and "Police" and saw four ruffians apparently engaged in an attempt to rob a man who was making the outery. When the policeman ran toward the group the highwaymen fied. Kenneally pursued them through Desbrosses-st., and fired two shots after cailing on them to stop. Two of the robbers then went through Washington-st. toward Watts-st., and escaped. The other two ran toward Vestry-st. and passed Policeman Perazzo, who had heard the shots fired by Kenneally. Perazzo called on the fugitives to hait, but they paid no attention to him. He drew his revolver and fired two shots as he was pursuing them. One of the men fell on the sidewalk and submitted to arrest, but the other made his escape.

It was discovered that the prisoner was bleeding from the wound in the right thigh. He gave his name as John Dolan, and said he was a painter, twenty-two years old, living at No. 220 Varick-st. The policeman took him to the Leonard Street Police Station and sent him thence to the Chambers Street Hospital. The man whom Dolan and his companions were trying to rob disappeared while the chase was in pregress, and although the police made the wound. The bullet entered Dolan's thigh from the front, while his back was toward the policemen when they were shooting. A surgeon at the hospital extracted the bullet, which was too large to fit the pistol of either officer. Citizens who witnessed the pursuit said they heard five shots fired. It was surmised that the companion of Dolan, who was ahead of him wheu Perazzo was shooting, turned and shot down the fugitive by mistake. Dolan's wound was believed to be dangerous.

ELOPING WITH A BREWER'S DAUGHTER.

The report that Louis Woerner, a bookkeeper and collector for Meltzer's brewery, of No. 96 Scholes-st., Brooklyn, had eloped with Miss Wilhelmina Meltzer, daughter of the late head of the brewery, caused much gossip yesterday in the Sixteenth Ward of Brooklyn, where they were well known. Woerner and Miss Meltzer disappeared simultaneously on last Wednesday night, and their friends were at first unwilling to believe that they had eloped, but as no trace of either could be found they were forced to think it true. Woerner atrended to his business as usual the day of his departure, and handed in the money he had collected. Woerner had been employed by Meltzer for seven years, and is about therty-five years of age. He had abandoned his wife, and a child three years old. Miss Meltzer is one of eight children, and is twenty years old. She made an excuse to go from home on Wednesday evening and did not return.

A DISCOVERY, A BLOW AND A SEPARATION. George Dupel, a bartender at the Bowery and Bayrard-st. and living at No. 183 Broadway, Brooklyn, had reason to suspect that in his absence from home at might attending to his business his wife was also away. On Saturday morning he went home at 6 o'clock, his usual hour being 8 o'clock. He found his wife absent, and his sister-in-law teid him that ahe had been out every night for a week. He then went out of the house, and saw his wife, a block away from home, get out of a coupe in which she had been driving with a New-York politician. Dupel they prevented his wife from entering the house, telling her to go back to the man she had left. Mis. Dupel knocked her husband down, and when he got up he returned the blow. A pollocans stopped the fighting, and linally Dupel gave his wife their only child, and she went away. The couple have been married four years. Dupel says he will never live with his wife again. A STEAMER ASHORE NEAR LONG BRANCH.
When the steamship New-Orleans, of the Cromwell Line, arrived at this port yesterday from New-Orleans Captain Halsey, who was in command, reported that he had passed a vessel ashore about twenty miles south of Long Branch. The vessel was surrounded by three tug-boats, and one of them could be seen pulling on a line attached to the seen of the vessel. The officers of the New-Orleans indged that the vessel had been thrown with great lorge on the sand. She was a British steamer, brig-rigged, and had black funnels with a red band painted A STEAMER ASHORE NEAR LONG BRANCH.

on the tops of each. It is thought that the steamer was an "ocean tramp" that name being given to freight vessels which have no regular routes, but run to whatever port promises to give them a cargo. The wreck was thought to be a new one, but as the sea was smooth and the tugs were on hand, Captain Halsey saw no necessity of stopping and making inquiries.

DR. GREEN'S FOREIGN NOTES.

AMERICAN SECURITIES DISCREDITED. CAUSE OF THE DISTRUST OF BRITISH INVESTORS-

THE TELEGRAPHERS' STRIKE.

Dr. Norvin Green was warmly welcomed by his associates yesterday when he appeared at the effice of the Western Union Telegraph(Company, of which he is the president. He says has health is much improved by his visit abread. In a conversation with a Thibune reporter on Sunday night Dr. Green explained that no attempt was made to list the Westers Union stock on the Lendon Stock Exchange, because of the failure to sell a large block of the stock to English purchasers. It is a prerequisite to listing a stock on the London Exchange that a considerable amount shall be owned and registered in the names of responsible persons on the other side of the Atlantic.

The hour when Dr. Green was seen on Sunday night was so late that only a few of his remarks could be printed yesterday. The following is a more extended report of the conversation. In response to the request for information as to the feeling in Great Britain regarding American stocks and boads Dr. Green said:

"There is a great deal of distrust of American THE TELEGRAPHERS' STRIKE, sponse to the request for information as to the feeling in Great Britain regarding American stocks and bonds Dr. Green said:

"There is a great deal of distrust of American securities of all kinds except the Government senses. As these pay no more than 3 per cent on the par value there is no reason for purchasing them when at that figure the British investor might as well purchase British consols. The British investing public has lost considerable money by purchasing Union Pacific, Wabash and some other of our bonds and stocks at prices above present quotations. The fall of Union Pacific and Wabash would not have had much effect in creating distrust of our securities, since they were to a certain extent known as speculative stocks, but the fall of New-York Central and Lake Shore from 20 to 25 points within a comparatively short period created widespread suspicion."

"Did the withdrawal of William H. Vanderbitt from the presidency of the New-York Central and other railroads in which he was supposed to own a controlling interest have a bad effect on foreign investors?"

"Yes, I think it did, although it ought not to hear dealers."

other railroads in which he was supposed to own a controlling interest have a bad effect on foreign investors?

"Yes, I think it did, although it ought not to have done so. Any one who has been acquainted with Mr. Vanderbiit knows that for two years before his retirement from the active management of his roads he was so shaping his business affairs as to relieve himself as far as possible from the strain and hard work which his various enterprises imposed on him. This was undoubtedly what he had in view when he sold the large block of New-York Central stock to a syndicate of bankers. Like most very wealthy men, Mr. Vanderbiit wanted to be relieved from the hard work and mental strain which responsibility for great enterprises in vore."

"Will this distrust pass away ?"

"Undoubtedly it will in time. Most of the nobility and gentry in England, as well as the banking and mercantile classes, have money to invest. England is a great creditor nation; every nation in Europe, with the possible exception of Germany, is its debtor. There is an enormous amount of money in the financial centres of Great Britain seeking investment, but the investors have been bitten so badly that they have become cautious. The nobility and gentry rely implicitly for advice in making investments on their solicitors. These are shrewd, careful lawyers, who have built up a profitable business by advising wealthy clients and investing money for them. Of course the stock in trade of these men is the fact that their advice proves to be sound—that investments recommended by them prove to be paying. Naturally, they dislike to take any risks for their principals or to recommend the latter to do so. The consequence is that money remains locked up instead of being put into new enterprises. They acknowledge the wonderful growth of our country and the opportunities for making money afforded by enterprises in the United States, but the general distrust owing to the causes I have mentioned softices for the present to prevent any considerable amount of Bri

"You have stated that the strike of the telegraph operators was not a matter of surprise to the ollicers of the Western Union Telegraph Company?"
"Yes: more than two years ago we ascertained that; there was an unruly and turbulent set of men among our employes who were actively at work organizing the Brotherhood and agitating for an increase of wages and a decrease of the hours of labor. I did not think that when the strike was ordered so many operators would go out. I believe that many signed the roll of the Brotherhood believing that it was a petition to the company on the subject of wages and the hours of labor."

The policeman took him to the Leonard Street Police Station and sent him thence to the Chambers Street Hospital. The man whom Dolan and his companions were trying to rob disappeared while the chase was in pregress, and although the police made diligent inquiries they were not able to get any trace of him. Kenneally and Perazze had a goodnatured controversy in the police station as to which one had shot Dolan. The operator is paid $50 or $60 and the rent is from $12 to $16 monthly. Now if the operator's hours are limited to eight daily we must either run the office at a loss by employing two operators or close it."

"Are not all the telegraph operators in Great Britan employed by the Government, which controls the telegraphs?"

"The majority are, but there are some employed by private corporations. All the various cable companies communicating with this country. France, Spain, Italy and other European nations, the East Indies, &c., have shore lines to London and Liverpool. The Western Union Telegraph Company leases two land lines from Penzance, where our cable land, to London and Liverpool. These land lines are leased by the cable companies from the British Government with the distinct understanding that no local business is to be transmitted over the wires."

"And it was from the telegraphers employed on these leased land lines that you expected to obtain recruits to take the places of the striking operators?"

tors ?"
"Yes; I had thirty-five or forty experienced and capable operators engaged, and was ready to send capable operators engaged, and was ready to send them to America at a day's notice, when I received information by cable that they were not needed here, as the company was satisfactorily filling the places of the operators who went out on strike."

"You received a good deal of attention on the other side!"

"You received a good deal of attention on the other side?"

"Yes, I received the most unbounded hospitality on all sides, both public and private. The public dianer to which I was invited in London has received some mention in the Press. Among other favors shown me was the receipt of a frank allowing me to telegraph free to any part of the United Kingdom. This was given me, I suppose, in compliment to my position as president of the Western Union Company, and partly in return for similar favors shown to prominent Englishmen who have visited us. I am fold that it is a rather unusual thing to do there. Even Mr. Gladstone pays for his own private telegrams.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM A SHARK.

A colored boy from Mexico, fifteen years of age, employed on board of the steamship City of Puebla, now in this port, had a wonderful escape from a large shark at vera Cruz. The boy could not speak English, but Commodore Deskin, commander of the seamship, who had been an eye witness, told the story yesterday. He said: "We were lying outside of the harber of Vera Cruz loading, as we were afraid of getting the yellow-fever if we went into the harbor, and this boy, Pedro, was cleaning out a boat which was lying alongside the vessel. He was leaning over washing off one of the seats when a shark's jaws appeared above the surface and made a snap for the darky. But Pedro was warned just in time, and went overboard on the opposite side of the boat. The shark floundered around in the boat until he got his head over the gunwale, and then went overboard before we could get a chance to harpoon him. The little darky, almost white with fright, lost no time after the shark went over, but scrambled into the boat and came on deck. We couldn't get that boy to wash that boat out after that." Chief Engineer Bloxam, the chief steward and other officers of the vessel gave a similar account of this wonderful escape. NARROW ESCAPE FROM A SHARK.

In 1811 he enlisted in the 54th Regiment, and served at the battle of Waterloo under the Duke of Weilington. He was at the capitulation of the Frenca army after the final struggle before Paris. He then returned to England with his regiment, the came to America in 1820. In 1835 he took part in the organization of the first brass band in Brooklyn. The discarded husband found the truckman who had done the job, but his lips had been sealed by $5 generously bestowed upon him by the boarder. The man continued his search, however, and on Tuesday afternoon he succeeded in ascertaining that his wife was settled comfortably in the tenement-house No. 155 West Frity-first-st. He went there in the evening and saw his faithless wife watching for her chosen companion. Since that time he has kept a vigilant watch on the building and yesterday morning he saw his furniture placed once more on a truck, and James mounting the vehicle the cargo was taken to the Cortlandt Street Ferry. James was then joined by Mrs. Flynn and her five children, and for whose shipment to Philadelphia tickets had been purchased. Flynn followed the group into the depot and began to upbraid his wife, but he was speedily silenced by a blow administered by the buxom Irish woman. A pollceman took her and her lover into custody, and directed the driver to convey the furniture to the Tombs Police Court.

Court.

In court the woman stated that she had received scarcely any money from her husband for six months, and that her household furniture, on the day she removed from Brooklyn, was placed on the sidewalk for non-payment of rent. Justice White committed the woman and James to the Island for a month and requested the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children to look after the little ones. The funditure was handed over to the husband and James's baggage was sent to Police Headquarters.

FIGHTING FOR A SWEETHEART.

HOW TWO DRIVERS SETTLED A DISPUTE

A DRAW AFTER SEVERAL ROUNDS.

John Carmody, a red-headed stalwart,driver of an ice-wagon and James Riley, a powerful youth, who lives by driving a dirt-cart, are both in love with a black-eyed damsel living in the rear of a tumble-down two-story frame building in West Forty-third-st., whose name is said to be Kate Donovan. Mr. Carmody had the pleasure of her company to Rockaway on Sunday, while Mr. Riley enjoyed her society in the yard of her house in the evening. The men were friends and they did not desire to fall out, but each man thought himself the best euchre-player in the Twentieth Ward, and they concluded to settle two disputed questions at one time. Mutual friends were interested, and it was arranged that the drivers should meet in a beer shop in Tenth-ave., near Fortieth-st., at 1 o'clock yesterday, and play three games of euchre, the man winning two games to be entitled to the exclusive steicty of the girl and the honor of being known as the champton euchre-A DRAW AFTER SEVERAL ROUNDS. character to the exclusive scelety of the girl and the bonor of being known as the champion cuchreplayer of the Twentieth Ward.

The meeting took place and the game was begun. Riley won the first game, Carmody the second, and the cards had been dealt for the third game when some one shouted that Riley had a joker up his sleeve.

"Ony man that save so is a loise," sheleted below.

the cards had been dealt for the third game when some one shouted that Riley had a joker up his sleeve.

"Ony man that says so is a loiar," shrieked Riley.

"Faith, oi don't know about that," said Carmody.

"Av yer insinewate that o'im chatin', yer a loiar," answered Riley.

Excitement followed, and in the confusion Carmody received a blow on the head with a glass, which has accused Riley of throwing. The two men clinched and several blows passed between them before they were separated. Then it was decided that they should be allowed to fight it out. A referee and seconds were chosen and the crowd left the beer shop and went to Fortieth-st, between Teuth and Eleventh-aves. A ring was formed and each man went into his respective corner and scated himself on an empty beer keg. At precisely two o'clock the referee called' time" and the men rushed at one another like mad bulls. It was give and take from the start. Blood streamed from the nose and mouth of each contestant almost simultaneously, and the seconds of each shouted "first blood" without being heeded.

When time was called the men had to be pulled apart and dragged to their corners. Both men were breathing heavily, but each seemed anxious to renew the conflict. Carmody's body showed large red lumps here and there, and Riley's face and lips were much swellen. Thesecond and third rounds were a repetition of the first, except that the blows did less execution. In the fourth round the men fought shy of each other. They advanced warily, and though many vicious blows were launched forth, nearly all fell short. In the fifth round Riley, who showed more science and less strength than. Carmody, was knocked down, but he railise and returned the compliment. The sixth round passed without damage to either, and in the seventh round the men staggered and fell against each other, and then rolled over helpless in the street. It was evident they could not fight any longer and the referee reluctantly declared the battle a draw.

THE ASSAILANTS OF YOUNG LANGMAACK NOT DIS COVERED.

COVERED.

The search for the assailants of Charles E. H. Langmaack, who was shot and robbed in Morrisania Saturday night, has not been successful. Detectives Veilely and Selleck, of Inspector Byrnes's staff, were yesterday detailed, with Officer J. R. Wilkins, of the Thirty-third Precinct, to investigate the case more fully. The cover of an old note-book was found on Sunday near the place where the struggle occurred. It was supposed at first that it had been dropped by the robbers. Several names written in it in a German handwriting were deciphered, but subsequent investigation showed it to have been lying on the ground for some days.

There is little doubt now in the minds of persons familiar with the facts of the shooting that Langfamiliar with the facts of the shooting the shoot

There is little doubt now in the minds of persons familiar with the facts of the shooting that Langmaack was attacked by mistake. It was so dark at the time, the sky being clouded, that nothing could be seen distinctly a few feet distant, and as the lad came along with his satchel, he might easily have been mistaken for the person for whom the robbers were lying in wait. This person, it is supposed, is Charles F. Reichmann, a collector for the Ebling brewery. Reichmann lives a few blocks in the rear of the brewery, and he generally returns home at night through One-hundred-and-hitty-sixthst, where Lancmaack was shot. It is known that his daily collections amounted to considerable sums, semetimes reaching $5,000. He rarely carries a large sum with him, however, usually getting rid of the money before he goes home. This fact was probably not known to the highwaymen, and it is supposed that they expected to do a profitable might's work, and to kill their victim rather than be identified. This fact, in conjunction with the pistel used, satisfies the police that the men were neither tramps nor professional thieves, as the latter never attempt murder except in extreme necessity. The most probable solution of the mystery in the minds of the police is that the robbers were persons who are acquainted with Reichmann's habits, and have perhaps been employed at some time in or about Ebling's brewery. Langamack's father and sister were with sim all day yesterday at the Ninety-ninth Street Hespital, and though his case is still critical, some improvement was reported, and his recovery is deemed reasonably certain.

THE RELATIONS OF LABOR AND CAPITAL

THE RELATIONS OF LABOR AND CAPITAL FACTS LEARNED BY INQUIRING SENATORS-WEST ERN UNION STATISTICS.

At the meeting of the Senate Sub-Committee on Education and Labor yesterday, Mrs. Charlotte Smith, of Washington, testified that the Women's National Industrial League, of which she is president, was the outgrowth of an indignation meeting held soon after Secretary Teller, of the Department of the Interior, ansounced his intention of employing only men in his department. Mrs. Smith said that the main principle which the League desires to emphasize is that there shall be no discrimination made in the payment of wages to men and women for the same work. She denounced Smith said that the main principle which the League desires to emphasize is that there shall be no discrimination made in the payment of wages to men and women for the same work. She denounced Seseretry Lincoin and Attorney-General Brewster, for discriminating against the women employed in their departments. It is well-known, she said, that the wages paid to women and girls are at least one-third less than those paid to men and boys for the same work. A cail for the formation of a women's national protective association will be issued in a few days.

A. H. Seymour, formerly manager of the Mutual Union Telegraph Company, asserted that, as the failure of the recent telegraphers' strike had plainly demonstrated that the Western Union was too powerful a corporation to be moved from its position on the wage question, theonly remedy for the practical strike work and troubles was the absorption by the Government of all telegraph companies. The telegraphers ask that one of two things be done: either that a Government telegraph system shall be established, or that a National law prohibiting the consolidation of rival telegraph companies, shall be enacted. The British Government telegraph lass been in operation fourteen years, and has proved a great success. In the year 1869 there were in Great Britam 2.488 offices, and 5,600 miles of wire. The number of messages sent was 6,500,000. In 1882 the number of messages sent was 6,500,000. In 1882 the number of offices had thereased to 5,000, the miles of wire to 110,000, and the number of miles of line owned by the Western Union Company in 1867 was 46,270, and the miles of wire 85,291. From the 2,565 offices 5,879,282 messages were sent. The receipta for that year were $6,568,925 36, and the expenses $3,944.005 63. In the short period of 16 years the lines increased to 131,032; the miles of wire to 374,294; the number of offices to 12,050, and the number of messages forwarded to 39,000,000. The receipts for the year 1882 were $17,114,166; the expenses $9,996,005, and the profi

THE STRIKES IN THE BUILDING TRADES. Delegates from the building trades-unions visited the Dakota flat-house yesterday morning and found that nearly all the strikers who had not gone to work elsewhere were gathered in front of the building ready to resume work so soon as the differences between the unions and Power & Brother, who have the plastering contract, were settled. No agreement was reached, however, and the men are still out. Mr. Power says that with his present force he can finish his work in a reasonable time. He has only one story and part of another to finish and he regards the demands of the unions as unwarranted and will not accede to them. He says that the story that the hod-hoisting engineers had left his employ was only true in part. He hires his own engineers and only one of them left him. He asserts that there are more than a hundred men now at work on the building, and as there is no sp cified time in which the building must be completed they can work along as they are for an indefinite time.

The strikers appear to be very confident and say that the bosses must yield soon. They put the number at work now at twenty-eight carpenters (ten of whom, they say, are apprentices), twelve ironworkers, three plumbers, fifteen plasterers (air of whom are apprentices), ten concrete layers and three hod-hoisting engineers, making a total of seventy-one men, of whom at least fifteen are apprentices.

Mr. Mehan, the executor of the Clark estate, said that he had made a contract with Power & Brother for the plaster-work in the Dakota, and so long as they did their work satisfactorily he could not interfere in the fight between them and the unions. Mr. Brady, the foreman of the plumbers in the building, said that he had some men at work and had refused a number of applications for work since the strike began, because his men were waiting on the carpenters. It was stated on the part of the strikers that seven of Power & Brother's men quit work yesterday and that feur were hired, but the story of the desertion was denied by Mr. Power. The delegates say that if an agreement be not reached in a day or two the men will be called off the other works on the Clark estate. There are no men at work o

FEES FOR THE SALE OF FIREWORKS.

FEES FOR THE SALE OF FIREWORKS.

F. Heidenis, of No. 145 Christopher-st., writes to The Tribune asking what becomes of the fees paid to the Bureau of Combustibles of the Fire Department between June 20 and July 10, for permits to sell fireworks. On inquiry at the Fire Department it was found that the money received this year amounted to $416.75. It goes to the "relief fund" for the benefit of widows and orphans of firemen. A permit to sell fireworks worth $25 is obtained for 25 cents. To sell fireworks worth $100 the fee is 50 cents, and $2 is the fee for a permit to sell fireworks worth $100 the fee is works valued at $1,000. Mr. Heidenis thinks the exacting of these fees an outrageous imposition. The Fire Commissioners and other city officials think that the fee system is a proper one as teuding to check the excessive sale of fireworks, while the amounts are so small that no injustice is done.
